Associate Professors: David Mitchell, Ron J. Smith

Assistant Professors: Emma L. Banks, Manuel Larrabure

Visiting Assistant Professor: Aynal Haque

International relations is a field of study concerned with the cultural, economic, environmental, historic, military and political interactions among the major units of the world, such as states, international organizations, transnational corporations, nongovernmental organizations, groups and individuals. Courses from a number of departments and programs are drawn upon to offer a multidisciplinary major in international relations for the bachelor of arts degree.

The purposes of the major are to increase general knowledge about the history, institutions, interactions and events of the international system; to develop insight into the objectives, decisions and policies of state and nonstate actors; to provide a conceptual vocabulary and diverse theoretical perspectives to help explain and interpret international behavior; to build skills in critical analysis and evaluation of global issues; to develop an appreciation of commensurability and difference and acceptance of "others;" and to encourage evaluation and the solving of global problems. International relations majors will develop skills in writing, speaking and information literacy throughout their studies, but particularly in IREL 250 Theories of International Relations and their senior seminar Culminating Experience.

The international relations major provides a general education for students seeking greater knowledge about world affairs. It also provides a sound preparation for students interested in pursuing an M.A. or Ph.D. in international relations and related social sciences, a J.D. in law, or for careers in the Foreign Service, the federal government, international law, international business, banking and finance, international organizations, think tanks, nongovernmental organizations, and the Peace Corps. International relations alumni have been accepted to the nation's top graduate programs and law schools and are well represented in all of the listed international careers.

Major Requirements

The international relations major consists of at least 11 courses to count exclusively toward the major.

Undeclared students interested in majoring in international relations are encouraged to contact the IR chairperson with questions about their academic progress. While students who start taking courses toward the major during the second semester of their sophomore year will be able to complete the major in their remaining time at Bucknell, the department recommends the following sequence of progress through the major:

First year: Students can take POLS 170 and ECON 127 during their first year. They should also take a language appropriate for the major. This language should align with their intended area concentration for the major.

Sophomore year: Students declare their major in the spring semester of the sophomore year. They should continue taking language courses. IREL 250 Theories of International Relations should be taken during the second semester of the sophomore year.

Junior year: IREL 250 should be taken during the first semester of junior year if not already completed in the sophomore year. Students should take IREL 350 Globalization as juniors. Students should also take the anchor courses for their thematic concentration and a course fulfilling the history requirement for their area concentration. They should continue to make progress in their language. Students are encouraged to study abroad for one or two semesters during their junior year.

Senior year: Students should complete their Culminating Experience requirement by enrolling in a senior seminar. They should also complete their language requirements and the remaining requirements for the major.

ECON 127	International Economics ¹	1
POLS 170	International Politics (to be completed by end of sophomore year)	1
IREL 250	Theories of International Relations ²	1
IREL 350	Globalization ³	1

Two area concentration courses (see list below) ⁵		2
Thematic concentration core course (see list below) ⁶		1
Two thematic concentration courses ⁶		2
One Culminating Experience seminar ⁷		1
Total Credits		11

- ¹ Students who are double majoring in international relations and economics should take ECON 427 International Economic Theory instead of ECON 127 International Economics. In those instances, ECON 427 may count toward the economics major. Students counting ECON 427 toward their economics major will need to take an additional IREL course to compensate. The additional course should be taken from the student's area concentration or thematic concentration.
- ² IREL 250 Theories of International Relations should be taken in the second semester of the sophomore year or in the first semester of the junior year. Students planning to spend a full year abroad should make sure that they complete IREL 250 before they go abroad. Students will ordinarily take POLS 170 International Politics before enrolling in IREL 250 Theories of International Relations, which is a W2 and will develop skills in writing, speaking and information literacy.
- ³ IREL 350 Globalization should ordinarily be taken during the fall of the junior year. If a student is spending the entire junior year abroad, it may be taken during the senior year. Students will ordinarily take ECON 127 International Economics before enrolling in IREL 350 Globalization.
- ⁴ One course must satisfy the history requirement for this area. The acceptable history courses for each area concentration are indicated by an asterisk (*) in the area concentration course lists. History courses taken abroad that are to be counted toward the area concentration must focus on the region or country of study. Histories of individual cities will not be accepted as satisfying the history requirement for the area concentration.
- ⁵ No more than two of these courses may be in the same department. A course that is counted toward the area concentration may not count toward a thematic concentration.
- ⁶ All core thematic concentration courses must be completed on campus. It is recommended that students take the core course first. A course that is counted toward a thematic concentration may not count toward an area concentration.
- ⁷ Students must enroll in a seminar during either semester of the senior year. This seminar, taught by international relations faculty and enrolled by international relations students, will serve as the College of Arts & Sciences Core Curriculum (CASCC) Culminating Experience requirement. These courses will be taught as W2s and will develop skills in research writing, speaking, presenting and information literacy. IR seminars that are Culminating Experiences are designated by IREL 4XX course number.

Additional Requirements

There are three additional requirements and rules for the international relations major as stipulated below:

- Of the 11 courses recorded for the major, no more than six courses may be taken from one department.
- No more than two off-campus courses will count toward the major per semester of study abroad. Students studying abroad for one semester may count two courses toward the major. Students studying abroad for a full year may count four courses toward the major.
- Competence must be demonstrated in a foreign language that is compatible with the area concentration, normally by successfully completing a one-credit, fifth-semester equivalent course in the target language on the culture or society of a country or region. The language(s) appropriate to each area concentration, and the Bucknell equivalent levels that are required to satisfy the major's language requirement, are noted in the area concentration course list. International students whose native language is not English are exempt, in consultation with the department chair, from the language requirement if they select an area concentration suitable for the native language.

One semester of study abroad is strongly recommended in a country within the area concentration and where the language being used for the language requirement is spoken. To receive credit for study abroad, it is expected that the country visited will fit with the area of concentration. With prior approval, students may transfer credit from study abroad that is outside their area of concentration if the study abroad is intended to complement a thematic concentration.

Other Considerations

Off-campus study in Washington, D.C., including the Washington Semester or Washington Center, also is recommended, but not as highly as overseas study. Students should contact the Office of International Education for information about off-campus study.

The department encourages students to pursue summer internships in positions related to international relations. Students have interned in embassies abroad as well as in government agencies in Washington, D.C.

Students who are interested in pursuing a subject in greater depth are encouraged, in consultation with their academic adviser, to consider independent study or honors thesis. Students planning to pursue graduate study in international relations should consider taking a course in social science methods, and microeconomics and macroeconomics.

For additional information, students are encouraged to visit the Department of International Relations website at bucknell.edu/InternationalRelations (<http://www.bucknell.edu/InternationalRelations/>).

International Relations Minor

The international relations minor consists of a minimum of five courses.

POLS 170	International Politics	1
IREL/POLS 277	International Political Economy	1
or ECON 127	International Economics
Select one of the following:		3
Three courses from one area concentration (see lists on the major's page).
Three courses from one thematic concentration (see lists on the major's page).

It is recommended that students majoring in economics who also intend to pursue an international relations minor take ECON 427 International Economic Theory instead of ECON 127 International Economics. When counting ECON 427 toward the economics major, an additional IREL course must be taken in the area concentration or thematic track chosen for the minor.

Students who choose to complete their international relations minor through an area concentration are encouraged to take one of the designated history courses, which are noted with an asterisk (*) in the lists on the department's webpage. Students who choose to complete their international relations minor through a thematic concentration are encouraged to take the appropriate core course indicated in the thematic track list. Students minoring in international relations are strongly encouraged, but not required, to develop competence in a suitable language.

1. Understand the major concepts of international relations, including: power, the international system, balance of power, hegemony, conflict, cooperation, integration, globalization, interdependence, dependence, regimes, globalization, equality, justice, sustainability and international political economy.
2. Understand and critically evaluate the theories and approaches to international relations, including realism, liberalism, classical and neo-Marxism, Neo-Gramscian, critical, post-modernist, post-colonial, sexuality and feminist.
3. Identify the key actors in international relations—including states, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations, transnational corporations, global civil society, and individuals—and understand how these actors interact to give substance to international relations.
4. Demonstrate a knowledge of the key dimensions, events and processes of international relations within their historic context, such as: the formation of the modern state system, the Treaty of Westphalia, the evolution of global capitalism, the origins of the Cold War, the shift to the post-Cold War system, the role of race, gender and class in the structure of the modern world system, major conflicts, such as the world wars, U. S. intervention in various places in the world, ascendant conflicts, the features and effects of globalizing market capitalism, growing environmental problems and human rights.
5. Demonstrate knowledge of the multi-disciplinary nature of international relations by establishing connections with the disciplines that have shaped and continue to influence international relations: politics, economics, society, culture, history, language, race, ethnicity, gender and sexuality.
6. Demonstrate skills of critical analysis and written and oral communication, including the ability to:
 - a. Read and reflect on disciplinary materials and literature carefully, critically and insightfully;
 - b. Write well-organized, informed, logically argued, clear, persuasive and stylistically correct essays and papers;
 - c. Participate actively in class discussions, verbally expressing ideas clearly, logically and persuasively.
7. Work effectively in teams and project groups.
